Bianco Light & Space is a Los Angeles based multi-faceted design and sculpture studio founded in 2013 by husband and wife team, Anthony Bianco and Alicia Reina. The studio specializes in creating sculptural, functional objects that fuse the concepts of light and space, drawing inspiration from nature, geometry, and ancient design principles. The duo's minimalist aesthetic, combined with rigorous technical craftsmanship, has earned their designs a strong following in the world of high-end design and architecture.

The studio's work is characterized by its sophisticated and dynamic use of materials, primarily glass and textiles, and a commitment to traditional techniques like Venetian glassblowing, lapidary carving, pattern tessellation, color theory, and surface design. Their designs often blur the lines between art and function, resulting in objects that are both visually striking and practically usable. Many of their works, including standout pieces like the Polaris Chandelier and Selene Sconce, combine geometric simplicity with a subtle, otherworldly quality, giving them an almost architectural or space-age feel.
